Vermont City Marathon

JYM WILSON, Free Press

The field takes off at the start of Sunday's Bank of Vermont/Vermont City Marathon.

ADAM RIESNER, Free Press

Thomas Simpson of St. Albans hits the 14-mile mark of the marathon with a splash of water.

KAREN PIKE, Free Press

One of 800 relay runners shows how distance running can be a lonely sport, even when 1,500 competitors are entered. He is running on the Northern Connector.

Shirley Silsby of Cotuit, Mass., wins the women's division in 2:51:24.

Men's winner sets City Marathon mark

Felix Pinto and Shirley Silsby slipped into Vermont in the quiet of the night Saturday, unknown and unheralded. Less than 24 hours later, each was widely acclaimed after winning the second annual Bank of Vermont/Vermont City Marathon.

Pinto, from Bogota, Colombia, and now living in Jamaica, N.Y., set a course record by finishing in 2 hours, 27 minutes, 9 seconds. Joe Kreutz of Shelburne won last year's race in 2:29:11. Pinto won the $1,000 first prize and earned a $500 bonus for eclipsing Kreutz's mark.

Silsby, whose family and friends in Cotuit, Mass., did not know she was racing Sunday, finished in 2:51:24. Leah Sikora-Fowler set the women's record of 2:48:22 in 1989.

"This is a present for my country," Pinto said through interpreter Maria Gonzalez-Baugh. "The image of my country has not been very good, and I hope this does something to improve that."

Men's pre-race favorite Chuck Smead of Mosca, Colo., finished second in 2:28:03. Rachid Thabi

Fla., materialized, but it was for third and fourth instead of for first and second.

Lisa Schmidt of Proctorsville finished second among the women in 2:53:38. Ciavarella was third in 2:58:11, Terry Hersh of Laconia, N.H., was fourth in 2:58:23, and Sperry was fifth in 3:04:55.

Silsby, a veteran of more than 20 marathons, did not enter the race until late Saturday and was unaware of the expectations that were dogging Sperry. She said, however, that she understood what Sperry was going through.

"I don't like people to put that pressure on me, because then you try to live for other people's expectations instead of your own and it's
